

International Conference
Health and Wellbeing in Sustainable Destinations
Indicators for Responsible Tourism

December 16-17, 2019 - Call for papers

Deadline extended October 5th 2109

The conference on Health and Wellbeing in Sustainable Destinations will be dedicated to the analysis and debate of indicators for the development of responsible tourism from a double perspective: health as a tourism product and health experiences of the local community of the destination. Two framework papers and two panels of experts will be organized with a varied representation of researchers, agents and professionals linked to both health, sustainability and responsible tourism.

We will also have a space dedicated to the presentation of communications based on research or experiences of good practices related to the theme of the conference. From the presentations, a set of papers will be selected to be published in the scientific journal PASOS.

Among the topics to be discussed include (non-exclusive):

- Health and well-being as a tourism product
- Health and local community
- Governance
- Sustainable development
- Responsible tourism
- Host and guest congruency
- Health, culture, heritage
- Social dimension of tourism

Important dates for the submission of communications:
